

Washington's phenomenal record of consecutive victories is bringing Johnson into his own. For years deciared by close observers to be one of the best, membership in a lagging team has barred him from the high station in baseballdom which his merits rightly entitled him to hold. However, now that Washington has a real team, it is likely that the public will give full consideration to Johnson's case and that he will get all that's coming to him.

Wolgast missed left to wind and Rivers hit him three times without return. Then Rivers put a hard left to jaw. Both silpped and nearly rolled out of the ring. Rivers seemed to force the fight, following. Wolgast could not hit him hard and clinched. Rivers then stood still and took four or five hard lefts and rights to the jaw but never winced. He then sent in a hard left, staggering the champion. Wolgast's smile had disappeared and he seemed very tired.

Wolgast got in a right to the wind, rushing Rivers to the ropes. Wolgast then tried hard to land on the wind, but could not get through Rivers's blocking. Time and again the chemplon missed, Rivers not attempting to follow up his advantage. Both rushed, and head to head, followed an exchange of fearful blows, Rivers having the better of the mixing. Rivers rushed, they clinched, both holding on, Wolgast nearly went over from a right to the law, but bored right in, putting left to wind. Take your time, Joe, shouted manager Levy to Rivers, "You've got him." Twice Wolgast missed, Rivers putting in left's to the face. Wolgast was gesting wilder than ever, but, Rivers kept away. Both boys were fighting head to nead, Wolgast, suddenly crouched and sont in a terrific left directly over Rivers's groin. At the same instant Rivers put tically out. Rivers kept away, a terrific left directly over Rivers's groin. At the same instant Rivers put his right to Wolgast's Jaw and the champion went down and was practically out. Rivers fell, writhing in paln, and referee Weich began to count. Chaims of foul were made in behalf of Rivers.

Manager Levy told referee Weich he would continue, but Weich immediately disappeared, awarding the decision to Wolgast.

Claims of foul by Rivers were not heeded by Welch. Turning, the referee picked Wolgast up from the floor and declared him the winner. His seconds had to carry him from the ring. Rivers was still lying on the floor but in a moment arose. The ring was immediately in semi-riot. Welch, seeing the crowd, announced that Wolgast was the winner.

It was the worst case of robbery in "It was the worst case of robbery in the history of the American prize ring," said manager Joe Levy, "Never before have I seen a referee give the decision to a man he had to pick up. grind, who paid their good money to see it, could not figure it out that way. The game was dragging along for two innings with the Bakers laying down on the job and showing an inclination to kick at the umpire's decisions. A little life was instilled in the crowd by the announcement that L. Van that the returns from the Johnson-Flynn fight were coming in, and he would apprise them of what was transpiring at Las Vegas. By this time the Bakers and the Milers burched into the third inning, and here was the first stunt that the Bakers pulled off. In this inning the Bakers had a man on first and a man on third. Heffner stepped up to the bat and drove a perfectly legitimate fly to McGee, in the center garden, which McGee should have nailed, but he didn't, and Walker, wanting to make room on first for Heffner, who was beating it down that way, ran on down to second. Well, before he got there, McGee had recovered his equilibrium sufficiently enough to hurl the peliet to the second baseman. The ball got there several seconds before Walker did, and his umps, Wyakoop, called the runner out. The din arose. The outfleders coming in to join the infielders in the cry for a new umpire. Wynkoop resigned, and Lorts took his place, and the spectacle went on.

Long before the soldiers and the Internationals took the diamond returns on the Johnson-Flynn fight stopped coming in, for the fight was a fizzle, as everyone knew that it would be, and those in the grandstand, as each round was announced, just wondered how many more rounds Flynn could go. They were glad when the soldiers ran out on the diamond.

A few of the local teams might take lessons from the army in running out on the diamond to take their respective positions. The army runs out like it

That the end with ginger and snap. That very thing has pulled them out of many a losing proposition, and the real keynote to the army's success lies in the fact that they play the game every minute.

E. Mesa was on the slab for the Internationals at the beginning of the game. He stayed there for almost three innings. Mesa was not doing so bad until the third inning, when he let in two runs. In addition to this, he put the ball on the wrong side of cause he was a "find." He had been discovered.

Well, the new one walked Terrel, the first man up. He treated Kemp likewise Grady stepped up and connected for a two-hagger, scoring the first two men. Then Lamb, who came along, was walked. The manager then took out the "find," and put Pisher, from the right field, in the bex. Adams came up and got to first because Caro, who went for the ball like it was a football, failed to fall on it for a touchdown. Fisher deserves a lot of credit, for with the bases full, he fanned the next two men up, and the third one knocked him an easy one. However, that was his best and only inning.

The sensation of the game was the ome run that Lamb negotiated. The score: 22d infantry.

Strikes and Balls

Notes on the Games. By "Chap"-

Lieutenant Terrell, the second sacker for the infantry, apeared Sunday in his last game of baseball for some time as he leaves soon on his furlough for California. Terrell its one of the mainstays of the team, and the question now is, will the soldiers succeed in getting another to fill his place.

What was the matter with the boy wonder, one Kid Warnock? He heaved them over like he was loading hay on a waron. Nine hits was all the Millers got.

Lopez, the center fleider of the In-ternationals, played his usual consist-ent game. Lopez classes with any one of them when it comes to gambeling in the center garden. Lamb was there with the home run Baker, only the army did not need the home run that he made. However, the fans appreciated the stunt.

Trimble, the handsome right fielder for the bakers, is there forty ways when it comes to pulling the high ones out of the air. He grabbed two of them in the first luning and both were feature plays. feature plays.

A wail of anguish arose from the grandstand when Erickson, the dependable, dropped the easy one knocked to him in center in the sixth. But he redeemed himself when he

With the profilest double play in sight, Ervin, posing on the third sack for the Internationals, held the ball for the count, and allowed the base runners to settle down safely on the
